PRACTICAL ADVICE¹

1. Remember that a song of praise is a spiritual weapon and brings deliverance to those that are in bondage, destroying the works of the enemy as the glory of God breaks through in the team's praise and binds the enemy. Do not select a song just because it is beautiful; but rather choose a song that releases the truth and power of God.
2. Choose songs that are known to the people, which work for the audience and are easy to be sung together to ensure maximum involvement and participation.
3. Do not make all the songs on the list complicated, but allow the people to relax and enjoy a song that is easy to sing.
4. When being in an assembly that had not learnt new songs in the recent years, it will be important to first start off with short and easy songs, and as the people get accustomed to this practice, the difficulty grade can be increased.
5. If a song does not work, scrap it.
6. Arrange and place songs in the order that flows together in rhythm, keys and themes:
 - Sometimes the team can move from one song to another without a break in the music.
 - After the singing of a song the team members can keep on with easy chord progressions while the singers spontaneously praise God moving slowly into the introduction of the next song.
 - Do not be afraid to have a quiet time of pondering before beginning to sing the next song if the Holy Spirit leads in that way.
 - Rehearse the introductions and interludes from one song to the next during rehearsals so that everyone is comfortable and acquainted with it. Make the intervals of changing from one song to another, which has a different chord, simple and as short as possible, depending on the moment that they find themselves in.
7. Respect age and cultural difference and adjust accordingly. Do not try and force the team's taste and will onto a generation that would not be acceptable to it. But rather fulfil it in opportunities that are created for the team within their generation gap. The purpose is for people to meet with God. Therefore, use songs that are known to help the generation to break through in the Spirit.
8. Do not rush through songs. The songs must come alive in the hearts and,,,
